Epicurious.com Adds Hundreds of Recipes from Random House, Inc.
Cookbooks to its Award-Winning Collection

Recipes from Martha Stewart, Bobby Flay, Lidia Bastianich, and Many More Available Free Via Leading Food Website

NEW YORK, October 26, 2009 – Epicurious.com, the premier food and recipe website, today announced that it has partnered with Random House, Inc. the world's largest English-language trade-book publisher, to add select recipes from its most respected cookbook authors and chefs to the site's searchable collection. Random House will provide Epicurious with hundreds of recipes each year from many of the most beloved cookbooks of all time, as well as from their newly published cookbooks. Users will be able to preview Random House's cookbooks before buying them, by searching for and cooking from select recipes via Epicurious.com. If they like the samplings, all they have to do is click the book's title on the recipe, and they can purchase the book from a retailing site.

For its launch, more than 100 recipes from Random House have been added to Epicurious's robust recipe collection of over 27,000 professionally tested recipes. Recipes include those from top culinary luminaries such as Nate Appelman, The Deen Bros Bobby Flay, Sarah Foster, Suzanne Goin, Judith Jones, Shelly Lindgren, Deborah Madison, Joan Nathan, The Neelys, James Peterson, Joel Robuchon, Charlie Trotter, and Robb Walsh. Hundreds more recipes from Random House and its imprints including: Broadway Books, Alfred. A. Knopf, Clarkson Potter, Ten Speed Press and Random House will be available on Epicurious by the end of 2009, and more will be added each coming year.
